

VULDEERREL

The Vuldeerrel is an African bird that is part of the Vulture family. It shares Genes and DNA with the American Squirrel and a Roe Deer. It has a length of 4 ft and weight of 14 to 25lb. It is a harmless species that's found in Africa. They eat freshly dead animals but often have to wait for their meal to soften in order to pierce the skin. Their main food is carrion but it will attack smaller animals, insects, snails, and eggs of birds. Vuldeerrel is the only bird of the vulture family that was born differently with a squirrel head and pointy ears from a roe deer. These ears look similar yet are different compared to squirrel ears. These ears help the Vuldeerrel to hear dangers that are miles away. The squirrel head and huge eyes on the Vuldeerrel allow it to look around without turning its head. It has the option to eat whatever he wants, either nuts and meat just like the vultures that eat meat and carrion.
